

Abstract

My master thesis is dedicated to proceedings in matrimonial cases – namely proceedings of marriage authorization and status matrimonial case proceedings. However, the main focus of my thesis is dedicated to divorce proceedings mainly because it is the most frequent proceeding from all in matrimonial cases and also because divorce represents a social phenomenon of current society.

The whole thesis is composed of three main segments along with an introduction and conclusion. The first segment of my thesis classifies proceedings in matrimonial cases in accordance with legal taxonomy as a part of uncontested proceedings. Then further describes the reason of division of uncontested proceedings from the Code of Civil Procedure and also relation between the Code of Civil Proceedings and the Act of Special Court Proceedings.

The following chapter engages in proceedings in matrimonial cases at first generally, then introduces the institute of marriage itself, follows enumeration on all types of matrimonial proceeding, analyses them and compares their differences and resemblances. Nevertheless divorce procedure is described in detail in the next segment of my thesis.

A separate part is dedicated to the divorce of marriage which consists of several chapters including divorce from sociological point of view, regulation of a divorce in substantive law, ensues divorce proceedings divided in many subchapters and finalises with one chapter regarding divorce proceedings with an international element.

The aim of my thesis is to provide a compact overview of Proceedings in Matrimonial Cases, analyse each procedure separately along with comparing the differences and similarities between them. It is worth mentioning special focus will be put on Divorce Proceedings which will be analysed in more depth.
